Mediation: "The doctrine of the Trinity implies that God is the living God! He is life and He lives in and through Himself. Life is energy expressing itself in activity. And it presupposes harmonious relationship. To live is to act and react normally in that relationship. Life cannot be in solitude. It always is some kind of communion of fellowship. Now, God is the implication of infinite energy. And in the triune God there is infinitely perfect relationship and harmony for this energy to express itself into constant activity. He is one, and this oneness is the eternal basis of the divine unity and harmony. Yet, He is not alone. Were He alone, He could not be the living God in Himself." (Herman Hoeksema).
