Meditation: “Let us bid adieu to all who, entangled by the snares of Satan, either are persuaded that they possess a righteousness out of Christ or imagine that they are happy in this world. Let our miseries drive us to seek Christ. And as he admits none to the enjoyment of his rest but those who sink under the burden [of sin], let us learn that there is no venom more deadly than that slothfulness which is produced in us either by earthly happiness or by a false and deceitful opinion of our own righteousness and virtue. Let each of us labor earnestly to arouse himself first, by vigorously shaking off the luxuries of the world; and, secondly, by laying aside every false confidence. Now although this preparation for coming to Christ makes them as dead men, yet it ought to be observed that it is the gift of the Holy Spirit because it is the commencement of repentance, to which no man aspires in his own strength. Christ did not intend to show what man can do of himself, but only to inform us what must be the feelings of those who come to him.” (John Calvin)
